Domestic Violence

Domestic violence refers to physical, sexual or emotional violence from an adult perpetrator directed towards an adult victim in the context of a close relationship.

The impact which domestic violence has will vary from person to person, but there is growing evidence to confirm that it does have serious and long lasting consequences on the health and well being of the individual.

Risks

While living in households obviously carries significant risks for children leaving a relationship does not always guarantee children’s safety. Research shows that abusers frequently use contact visits to abuse their victims and their children. Research in 1999 for example, found that 76% of 148 children ordered by the courts to have contact with a violent parent were said to have been abused in the following ways during contact visits:

Refer if you are concerned about a child 0161 253 5454

Consider capacity if only an adult involved 0161 253 5151, but also consider public interest and referring onto the police.
